GOP proposes deep tax cuts, provides few details on how to pay for them

By Damian Paletta, Mike DeBonis and Carolyn Y. Johnson September 27

Republican leaders on Wednesday proposed slashing tax rates for the wealthy, the middle class and businesses while preserving popular tax deductions that encourage buying homes and giving to charity, hoping to unify the party behind a proposal to revamp the U.S. tax code.

But the nine-page framework they released to kick off negotiations left many key questions unanswered, including how they plan to avoid adding trillions of dollars to the government's debt. The framework leaned heavily on limiting taxes paid by the wealthiest Americans, such as the alternative-minimum tax, and opposition to these changes from Democrats suggest it will be a battleground as negotiations intensify.

Republicans were also careful not to identify numerous tax breaks they might remove, focusing instead on promises to lower rates so much that President Trump estimated the effort would amount to the biggest tax cut of all time.

The "unified framework" was meant to serve as a starting point for negotiations on a tax deal, which lawmakers hope to complete by the end of the year. Republican leaders are now tasked with resolving controversial questions to unite their party — and possibly some Democrats — behind tax legislation, such as what corporate tax breaks to protect and how much revenue they are willing to lose in pursuit of new economic growth.

Trump has made rewriting the tax code a major part of his domestic agenda, and on Wednesday he urged his party on.

“This is a once-in-a-generation opportunity, and I guess it’s probably something you could say I’m very good at,” Trump said in Indiana. “I’ve been waiting for this for a long time.”

The Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget estimated that the nine-page framework would equate to a $2.2 trillion tax cut, with $5.8 trillion lost to lower rates and other changes, and another $3.6 trillion recouped by eliminating deductions.

There were few initial estimates of what the tax framework might mean for economic growth, an area that will likely divide Republicans supportive of the plan and Democrats who immediately complained that the changes would disproportionately benefit the wealthy.

The White House and GOP leaders negotiated for months and agreed in large part only on the taxes they want to cut. They now face the more arduous task of agreeing on which tax deductions to take away, a process sure to pit party members against each other and put them under extreme pressure from outside lobby groups fighting to protect their favored tax breaks.

“I hope that people will have the intestinal fortitude it’s going to take to do it right,” Sen. Bob Corker (R-Tenn.) said late Tuesday. “People say the health care was hard — you have no idea. You have no idea how this is going to be.”

In Indiana, Trump threatened to try to oust Democrats who don’t vote to help push the tax cuts into law. He singled out Sen. Joe Donnelly (D-Ind.), who is up for reelection next year, as a Democrat who would be targeted if he didn’t sign onto the GOP plan.

“We will come here, we will campaign against him like you wouldn’t believe,” Trump said.

Democratic leaders will try to keep their party united in opposition, and on Wednesday they charged the GOP with proposing a huge tax cut to the wealthy but offering little for anyone else.

They said there was little evidence the tax plan provided any tax relief for low-income Americans, and it couldn’t be learned how much the middle class would benefit, either. Republicans didn’t specify what tax rates would apply to certain income levels, making it also hard to determine the framework’s impact.

“Republicans’ tax framework is not tax reform,” said House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.). “It is a framework that gives away the store to the wealthiest while sticking the middle class with the bill.”

Without Democratic support, Republicans would need near-universal backing from their own party to move a tax bill through Congress, especially in the Senate, where they hold a slim majority.

In their blueprint, Republican proposals include cutting the corporate tax rate from 35 percent to 20 percent and making it much easier for multinational companies to bring money earned overseas into the United States. This is roughly in line with a long-standing House Republican goal, though Trump has consistently pushed for the corporate rate to be lowered to 15 percent.

They also propose collapsing the seven individual income-tax brackets into three and allowing more people to qualify for the Child Tax Credit, designed to help low-income working families.

The framework would roughly double the standard deduction that married families and individuals use to reduce their taxable income, a change that Republicans hope will simplify the filing system. But it would also eliminate the “personal exemption” taxpayers can claim, blunting much of the new benefit and potentially leading some middle class households with multiple family members to pay more taxes than they currently do.

Republicans also are holding out the possibility of imposing a new, higher tax rate on the wealthy to ensure that the tax changes do not disadvantage the middle class, though the White House and GOP leaders have not agreed on how that would work.

Many of the tax changes would benefit upper-income Americans. The Republicans propose eliminating the estate tax and the alternative minimum tax. They also proposed lowering taxes on investment income. The tax framework does not mention Trump’s long-standing promise of raising taxes for hedge fund managers, suggesting that differences on this point have not been resolved.

While the blueprint preserves tax breaks for mortgage interest and charitable contributions, it proposes changing the tax benefits for retirement and education. It is unclear how those changes might work.

The next step for congressional Republicans is to pass a budget resolution that would allow a tax bill to pass the Senate with a 51-vote majority. Senate bills often need 60 votes to overcome a filibuster, but the budget resolution would allow Republicans to use the process known as “reconciliation” to avoid that higher threshold.

Sen. Patrick J. Toomey (R-Pa.) said Wednesday the Senate Budget Committee is expected to send a draft budget to the Senate floor next week.

The House Freedom Caucus, a key holdout bloc of conservative lawmakers, endorsed the tax framework Wednesday, setting up a floor vote on the House budget as soon as next week. That would set up a conference between the chambers, with senior Republicans expecting the final, consensus budget resolution to closely resemble the Senate version.

Once the budget resolution passes both chambers, the tax-writing committees — Senate Finance and House Ways and Means — would begin drafting and amending tax legislation, where the politically thorny work of identifying revenue offsets would take place.

Toomey acknowledged that hard trade-offs are ahead, saying that lawmakers will have to identify offsets of about $3 trillion over 10 years to align the plan with the budget resolution.

The framework released Wednesday calls for eliminating many business tax credits and individual income deductions, while specifically naming only a few that should be spared.

“We’ve definitely identified the items that can get us there,” Toomey said. “The question is: Will we have the political will to do it?”

To raise revenue to offset the cuts, Republicans are likely to consider limiting or eliminating the deductibility of state and local taxes, a proposal that is generating opposition from lawmakers in states with high tax burdens. They will also consider limits on how much businesses can deduct for interest payments, a tax provision frequently used by financial and real estate firms.

“Those are two big ones that have to be on the table,” Toomey said.

Business groups, who have already been leaning heavily on lawmakers to protect their favored tax breaks, had mixed reactions to the plan. Many cheered the general direction of the plan but made clear they were watching how Congress approached key unresolved details.

“Now, we are entering into a crucial new phase of the effort to overhaul the tax code, and the hardest work is just beginning,” U.S. Chamber of Commerce President Thomas J. Donohue said in a statement. House Ways and Means Committee chairman Kevin Brady (R-Tex.) will visit the Chamber on Thursday to discuss the plan.

Koch Industries sent an open letter to Congress, praising members for moving forward on the tax changes but encouraging lawmakers to cut as many business-specific tax breaks as possible.

“We encourage policymakers to remove corporate welfare provisions from the code. Wherever possible, loopholes, deductions, exemptions and other handouts should disappear. We maintain that cutting rates is the most reliable pathway to growth,” wrote Philip Ellender, president of government and public affairs at Koch Companies Public Sector.

Other industry groups outlined specific concerns.

The National Association of Realtors denounced the blueprint, saying in a statement Wednesday that the proposal to double the standard deduction would “all but nullify the incentive to purchase a home” for most taxpayers. With the standard deduction doubling, more homeowners would probably use that deduction when they filed their tax returns, rather than taking advantage of the lucrative mortgage interest deduction.

“This proposal recommends a backdoor elimination of the mortgage interest deduction for all but the top 5 percent who would still itemize their deductions,” William E. Brown, president of the National Association of Realtors, said in a statement. “Plummeting home values are a poor housewarming gift for recent homebuyers and a tremendous blow to older Americans who depend on their home to provide a nest egg for retirement.”

Jim Tobin, the chief lobbyist for the National Association of Home Builders, said his organization was encouraged to see many of its top priorities included, including access to interest deductions and the preservation of the low-income housing credit.

He said his organization, like that of the Realtors, was concerned about doubling the standard deduction and about losing the deduction for state and local taxes.

“We also recognize we’re in the opening stages of what is going to be a long fight, a long journey, to realize tax reform — so as the opening play in this, we feel good about continuing to move forward,” Tobin said.

Re: Old Greenbelt Theatre
August 2017 Monthly Report

Dear City Council,

Attached please find our August financial report. August showed a modest profit of $2,783.25. This was one of the two three-payroll months of the year, so we knew it would be more challenging than most. In non-taxed revenue we brought in nearly $5,000 in sponsorships and individual donations. We also nearly doubled our rental income over last month. All of these revenue sources were vital in a month that was abysmal industry- and country-wide in box office revenues.

We had a total of 12 community events this month. Just as last month, Storytime on Screen continues to be very popular, and as were our final films in our free School's Out Series. Hundreds of kids and parents come to every Thursday show. It total for the month of August, over 1,100 children and their parents attended these free screenings.

We also had high attendance at our special screening of the Al Gore documentary, Inconvenient Sequel, with a guest speaker on climate change.

We had a very high total of membership sales with 81 sold (30 of which were new), bringing the current total to 1,026. This included 14 family memberships, likely a result of the successful summer series discussed above.

If you have any questions about any of this information, or any data that isn't provided here, please let me know. (Caitlin@greenbelttheatre.org, or 301-456-5076.)

Best wishes,

Subject: Movie Night @ Greenbelt Park

The "drive in" movie theater at Greenbelt Park is on schedule and it looks as though the weather will be perfect!

American Graffiti under the stars of early autumn (the end of summer): how appropriate. I can just imagine a white T-Bird driving by! Hopefully, some classic cars may show, as I have been putting the word out over the past two months or so.

We are looking at a showtime of 8:15 p.m. I have a ranger talk before that at 7:45 on the film and the times that spawned it in George Lucas's mind. Where were you in '62?, so to speak. I think we should have everything set up and ready to go by 7 p.m. so we might gather at Sweetgum around 6 to erect screen and so forth.

We cannot do this without your kind and generous support, and we are hoping to eclipse last year's attendance for North by Northwest with tomorrow's "drive in."

Thank you,

Subject: RE: Walk to School day

Please find below the details regarding start times and locations for International Walk to School Day, which takes place Wednesday, October 4th.

Springhill Lake Elementary School:

Students and teachers will be meeting in the rear parking lot of Beltway Plaza (near the rear entrance of Beltway Plaza Mall facing Cherrywood Lane) at approximately 7:00 A.M. They are scheduled to begin their walk between 7:10 A.M. and 7:20 A.M., after some photo ops. We again have a large carry banner for the students.

Greenbelt Elementary School- Students meeting at three (3) different locations:

Hedgewood and Lastner Lane at 8:30 A.M.

Greenbelt Community Center at 8:30 A.M.

Plateau Place and Ridge Road at 8:45 A.M.

There should also be a crossing guard in front of both schools.

About The National Consortium for Creative Placemaking

The National Consortium for Creative Placemaking (NCCP) was created to build capacity for sustainable and cost-effective creative placemaking.

Creative placemaking is a new way of making communities more livable and prosperous through the arts, and making them better places for the arts. Creative placemaking is about more than public art or performing arts centers. It is about making places better for everyone.

NCCP provides community coaching, practical research and thought leadership to help cultural and civic leaders build their capacity to do creative placemaking... better

Like what you're seeing? Want to get updates? Join our mailing list.

How we add value

The National Consortium provides a wide variety of services in four areas:

Community coaching -- Through this program, we help teams of community stakeholders build clear and cost-effective strategies for creative placemaking, and strengthen their abilities to implement their strategies.

Continuing education -- We provide in-person and online training and learning in creative placemaking. We created the innovative and respected Master Practitioner Certificate in Creative Placemaking at Rutgers University.

Thought leadership -- We promote high quality creative placemaking in multiple ways -- from the strategically placed op-ed, to the podium on the stage, to the quiet conversation with key influencers.

Creative Placemaking planning -- We provide a wide range of planning services to strengthen your plan.

Updates on Creative Placemaking Leadership Summits: Save the dates, themes for DC area conference, new partners

By Leonardo Vazquez, AICP/IPP

We're working hard on the Creative Placemaking Leadership Summits for 2018, and there is a lot of news to report:

- Please hold March 14 and 15 for the Southeast Creative Placemaking Leadership Summit. We'll soon announce where it will be.
- The DC-area Creative Placemaking Leadership Summit will be held either October 5 and 6 or October 19 and 20, most likely in College Park, Maryland. The DC-area Summit region includes Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia. It will focus on these themes:
  - Protecting and enhancing historic, cultural and environmental assets
  - Leading community change
  - Building stronger ecosystems for creativity
  - Empowering communities
- The Northeast Corridor, which explores issues affecting communities in Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Vermont, will be May 3 and 4 in New Jersey. (Location TBD)
- We will be sending out a new RFP in October, after we have reviewed the first round of proposals with the planning teams.
- It's always good to make more friends. New partners and supporters for the Leadership Summits include ArtPlace America, Metris Arts Consulting, Mortimer and Mimi Levitt Foundation, and the New England and New York Metro chapters of the American Planning Association.

To get updates on Leadership Summits or other programs produced by NCCP, sign up for our newsletter, Like us on Facebook or follow us on Twitter.

CITY NOTES

Greenbelt CARES

Week Ending September 29

My name is Nima Shamsa and I am the new GAIL Public Health Intern for Fall 2017. I am a senior at the University of Maryland studying under the School of Public Health pursuing a Bachelor of Science in Community Health. After graduating, I hope to work in community outreach, helping low-income neighborhoods connect with health resources. In the future, I would like to continue my public health education by pursuing a Masters in Public Health, as well as working towards a M.D. I look forward to meeting and working with everyone here at GAIL. I am eager to meet the residents and assist them in any way I can.

Washington Adventist University Geriatric Community Nursing Program started 9/6. They are working with 6 students and serving 12 senior and/or adult with disabilities in the community.

Bowie State University Pediatric Community Nursing Program started 9/14. They are working with 6 nurses and serving 18 families and 28 children in the community.

The Memory Café, facilitated by Sharon Johnson, started 9/6. There are currently between 8 and 13 individuals participating in the Memory Café.

The Caregiver Support Group, also facilitated by Sharon Johnson, started 9/13. There are currently 12 individuals participating in the group.

Darren Stephenson and Judy Hering participated in the Springhill Lake Elementary School Back to School program. They both presented information about the programs and services offered at Greenbelt CARES: tutoring, after-school homework help, counseling, ESOL for adults, etc.

Judye Hering began the fall session of the Saturday morning tutoring on Saturday, September 23. The program meets every Saturday morning, from 10:00 – 12:00, in the Springhill Lake Recreation Center Clubhouse. 6 students attended the first session of the school year.

Judye Hering began the fall semester of the GED course on Monday, September 25. Students review 4 subject areas in preparation for taking the GED test. This class will be held for 10 weeks, every Tuesday and Thursday, from 10 am – 12 pm, in the Springhill Lake Recreation Center Clubhouse. Ten students enrolled in the course.

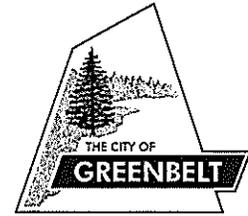

Judye Hering began the ESOL course on Tuesday, September 26. The program meets twice a week, Tuesday and Thursday, from 9:30 am – 11 am, at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center Clubhouse. Adults speak: French, Taiwanese, Spanish and Arabic, and come from Taiwan, Cameroon, Honduras, Guatemala, El Salvador, Iraq and the Sudan. Eight students attended.

Judye Hering began the After School Tutoring program on Tuesday, September 26. The program meets on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, from 2 pm – 5 pm, in the Springhill Lake Recreation Center Clubhouse. Eight students attended the first session, with more expected in the coming weeks.

ARTS:

- Preparations are underway for a full day of arts activities on Sunday, October 1, including Greenbelt Legacy 80th Anniversary programs. The Greenbelt Paint-Out Picnic – a plein air drawing and painting event for all ages – will honor the city's foundational commitment to green space and its long tradition of support for community arts. Check-in will be ongoing at the Community Center from 10am – 12pm. Participants will create in the field and then reconvene for a picnic and art share from 1-2pm on the Community Center lawn. Bring art supplies and a lunch. A children's Artful Afternoon craft workshop will run from 1-3pm in room 113, and a studio open house and sale with our Artists in Residence will run from 1-4pm. The Greenbelt Museum house at 10-b Crescent Road will be open for tours from 1-5pm ($3). At 3pm, there will be a full house for Chris Cherry's show Here to Stay: Music of the Greenbelt Pioneers, celebrating the arrival of Greenbelt's first families with popular music selections from the 1930s. (All of the free tickets available for this performance have been given out.)
- Staff joined the City Manager in participating in a teleconference concerning the planning of a 2018 regional leadership summit of the National Consortium for Creative Placemaking. A call for session proposals is expected to be available within the coming weeks.
- The winter activity guide is being edited.
- Currently on view at the Greenbelt Community Center Art Gallery – Superblocks: A Drawing Installation by Amanda Burnham. Presented as part of the Greenbelt Legacy 80th anniversary celebration, this exhibit will continue through October 27.
- Ongoing activities include: receipt and processing of Festival of Lights Art and Craft Fair applications – due September 29; program development; and marketing.
